| Inflation forecasts have been revised upwards for the short-term. The upward revision is a result of a combination of higher than expected inflation outturn in November 2020 coupled with the continuous upside factors which exerted inflationary pressures on the domestic consumer price inflation. Among the upside factors is the delayed unwinding of the COVID-19 effects as the second wave threatens to dampen faster economic recovery. While the second wave is expected to cause significant supply side disruptions and exert upward pressure on domestic inflation, the effect will likely be minimal as efforts to curtail the negative economic impact of the pandemic have already been rolled out. Furthermore, the higher than previously anticipated Brent crude oil prices arising from an expected global economic recovery in the short to medium term adds upward pressure on inflation. The effect of a hike in domestic administered prices expected in the second quarter of 2021 will exert upward pressure on inflation. On the downside, the Rand is expected to gradually appreciate throughout 2021, relieving pressure on domestic inflation. Further, the prospect of the success of the COVID-19 vaccine especially on the regional economic recovery presents is expected to improve the inflation trajectory. As a result, inflation rate for the first quarter of 2021 is expected to be higher at 5.04 per cent than the previous forecast of 4.82 per cent, The second quarter of 2021 is also revised up to 5.88 per cent from 5.86 per cent in November 2020. The annual average forecast for 2021 is therefore slightly higher at 5.42 per cent than the 5.38 per cent projected in November 2020. | Quarter 1 Average                | 4.82     | 5.04    |  |
